Master of Ceremonies

The role of an MC is to warm up the crowd, to prepare them for the program ahead. The MC sets the tone and makes the main stars of the show (guests) look good and makes sure there are smooth transitions between different segments of the program so that it flows smoothly.

A corporate MC plays a crucial role in the success of any corporate event. They help to represent the conference or event as a whole, while keeping the show on schedule and keeping the audience engaged. The MC needs to be a quick thinker who is able to respond to audience moods and needs as they arise, as well as have a sense of humour and a good grasp of the event's overriding subject matter and theme.

We represent a vast array of MCs who all work tirelessly to ensure your event is professionally executed.

Motivation & Keynote

Events, seminars and conferences almost always require a Keynote speaker. It's essential that the right person is found for the audience and event type. With the world focusing on niche and specialisation, as opposed to generalisation, Keynote speakers are becoming a high-demand commodity. This isn't about rah-rah speeches anymore – it's about delving deep with clarity into a topic that is relevant and useful to the audience.

If you think of an orchestra, where numerous instruments are playing, it becomes a great analogy for a conference, seminar or event. The Keynote speech sets the tone, the timbre and the cadence, which is vital for getting the audience into the right mood and moving the event along the right trajectory. A great Keynote speaker is able to understand and fully outline the overarching theme, setting the scene for all that will follow. This is done by building up the audience and making them think about a topic in a way they may not have done before. The Keynote speaker's job is to leave the audience inspired and excited about the information they'll be hearing during the rest of the conference or seminar.

The Speakers Firm has a plethora of excellent keynote and motivational speakers to suit any audience or topic.

Facilitators & Panel Chairpersons

Business has changed over the years – a more inclusive, less formal way of conducting business has become the norm, along with transparency and a deeper understanding of people as individuals.

Communication is a way of building and maintaining relationships. Without effective communication skills, it is difficult to properly construct and foster productive relationships. It is also a facilitator for innovation – when employees feel comfortable in openly communicating new ideas, cooperation and innovation will be at an all-time high. Effective team building is only done through open communication. When employees feel that they are well informed of the company's direction and vision, they will feel more secure within their role. Regular internal communication can also lead to an improved work ethic if staff are reminded of achievements and feel that they are working towards a common goal.

Good and effective communication is an essential tool in achieving productivity and maintaining strong, lasting working relationships at all levels of an organisation. Employers who invest time and energy into delivering clear lines of communication will rapidly build trust amongst employees, leading to increases in productivity, output, and morale in general.

Poor communication in the workplace will inevitably lead to unmotivated, ill-informed staff that may begin to question confidence in their abilities and eventually the organisation as a whole.

Get your organisation on track with effective communication – whether for an event, a boardroom session or a change-management programme, The Speakers Firm represents a pool of highly effective facilitators and chairpersons who can ensure your goals and information is succinctly communicated.

4IR & THE FUTURE OF WORK

New forces are transforming the world of work: Technological development, environmental crisis, demographic shifts, globalisation and economic insecurity. While some jobs will be lost, and many others created, almost all will change. South Africa has a youth population of 20.6 million making up 35.7 per cent of the country's total population. However, with the unemployment rate reaching its highest since 2003 and the fact that many South African citizens lack the skills to cope with the demand of The Fourth Industrial Revolution; it begs the question of whether South Africa is prepared for the future of work.

To 'future proof' their investments in re-skilling and hiring, and maximise the productivity of their workforces, companies will need to adapt to evolving employee expectations and ways of working. Those include greater focus on meaningful work, flexibility and autonomy, continuous growth and connection.

Do you know how to keep your business on a growth trajectory in today's climate? Do you want to inspire your staff and management to creatively innovate and find solutions to the challenges and opportunities faced by the 4th Industrial Revolution? We have a selection of speakers who will inform, inspire and educate you and your audience on the latest trends and solutions.

Media Reputation & Branding

Reputation has always been a cherished quality. However, it has arguably never been more volatile. The internet, consumer generated feedback and social media has created an environment in which seemingly modest transgressions can have widespread consequences, and where a single, serious incident can cause long-term or perhaps terminal damage to an individual, organisation or nation. Today's news is no longer yesterday's chip paper - the online testament lasts a great deal longer.

We are in the midst of a new economy, in which reputation and trust are burning platforms, and powerful drivers of economic and strategic change. Consumers and community interests are armed with social media tools and instant ratings platforms. They expose and vote with their fingers; and can buy elsewhere with a simple tap. Meanwhile, for individuals, an online ledger in the form of social media can serve as a list of publicly accessible transgressions. The Speakers Firm represents professionals within this space who can assist in informing and educating your audience on best practices within the realm of reputation management and effective branding.

GENDER, HIV AIDS & SEXUALITY

Despite the movement towards gender equality around the world, there is still a long way to go. The world is geared towards patriarchy and change will take time. However, conversations that are taking place on a global level are making headway towards changing the narrative. The issue is systemic and as with most deep-seated systems, change is slow.

Gender inequality and HIV and AIDS are interconnected phenomena. The workplace is an important entry point to address both. In order to be effective, workplace initiatives on HIV must address gender issues including related and underlying HIV and AIDS vulnerabilities, as well as the specific needs of both women and men.

A big focus in recruiting today is workplace diversity, which can be defined as: understanding, accepting, and valuing differences between people of different races, ethnicities, genders, ages, religions, disabilities, and sexual orientations, as well as differences in personalities, skill sets, experiences, and knowledge bases.

The Speakers Firm represents highly qualified speakers who are all professionals within the sphere of gender, HIV/AIDS and Sexuality, enabling you to learn how to embrace the changing work of gender identity, as well as address issues such as diversity as well as HIV/AIDS in the context of the workplace.

Strategy, People & Governance

Studies have shown that the most effective leadership initiatives are those that are appropriately directed. They also describe successful companies as being able to adapt their leadership development practices according to their business goals, needs or challenges.

When leaders take personal accountability, they are willing to answer for the outcomes of their choices, their behaviours, and their actions in all situations in which they are involved. Accountable leaders do not blame others when things go topsy-turvy. Rather, they make things right – they are fixers. Accountable leaders build an accurate understanding of their organization – where it excels and where it has opportunity. Accountable leaders step up to champion opportunities to succeed. Accountable leaders question the decisions and processes that shape your organization. They ask questions and they find answers – the best answers.

The Speakers Firm can tap into a vast pool of speakers with exceptional experience and knowledge of the issues faced by leaders in today's world, expounding on how to lead, what good governance really means and how to maximise people potential through effective culture building.

HEALTH & WELLNESS

Today's workforce is multi-generational, with both Millennials and Generation Z's as the driving force behind conversations about health and wellness in the workplace. According to research just published by ClassPass, "Seventy-five percent of professionals surveyed believe it is their employer's responsibility to contribute to their health and wellbeing, ideally in part by providing wellness benefits to employees."

Wellness is all-encompassing, covering every aspect of human health, from mental to physical wellbeing. The medical versus the wellness model stresses the importance of educating not only health care givers, but also patients on how to manage wellness, as opposed to merely addressing symptoms.

Non-communicable (or, lifestyle) diseases account for 71% of all deaths globally. And yet, these are preventable. In their report, Mortality and causes of death in South Africa, 2016: Findings from death notification, Stats SA says, "Notably, the top 3 leading natural causes of death for males had a combination of communicable and noncommunicable diseases, while for females there were only non-communicable diseases."

Discover, with the input from our pool of highly qualified speakers, how to navigate employee wellness as well as what the trends are in both the health and wellness industries as well as business wellness.

Economics & Politics

Economics is concerned with studying and influencing the economy. Politics is the theory and practice of influencing people through the exercise of power, e.g. governments, elections and political parties.

In theory, economics could be non-political. An ideal economist should ignore any political bias or prejudice to give neutral, unbiased information and recommendations on how to improve the economic performance of a country. Elected politicians could then weigh up this economic information and decide.

In practice there is a strong relationship between economics and politics because the performance of the economy is one of the key political battlegrounds. Many economic issues are inherently political because they lend themselves to different opinions.

The Speakers Firm represents numerous highly informed and talented experts who can help you navigate how politics and economics can affect your business as well as the way in which you need to lead into the future.

TRENDS, DISRUPTION, TECHNOLOGY & INNOVATION

The Fourth Industrial Revolution's technologies, such as artificial intelligence, genome editing, augmented reality, robotics, and 3-D printing, are rapidly changing the way humans create, exchange, and distribute value. As occurred in the previous revolutions, this will profoundly transform institutions, industries, and individuals. More importantly, this revolution will be guided by the choices that people make today: the world in 50 to 100 years from now will owe a lot of its character to how we think about, invest in, and deploy these powerful new technologies.

Companies today are scrambling to catch up with the technology speed train; The Speakers Firm has access to some of South Africa's foremost experts on disruptive technology, innovation and the impact of the 4th Industrial Revolution.

TEAM BUILDING

“None of us is as smart as all of us.”

– Ken Blanchard

Today's world revolves around interaction and collaboration – it's a knowledge economy, which is why effective teamwork is critical to the success of any business. Creating a cohesive team encourages multi-disciplinary work and fosters flexibility, responsiveness and people's ability to adapt to change. By working in a team, all members of that team are able to input and derive value from the collective; this means that the team as a whole can celebrate successes and overcome challenges together, giving each individual a better opportunity to grow and learn.

Working in a team also ensures that the best person for the task is present to do it – instead of working as individuals and in silos, there is a sense of collaboration and getting the job done; there is also a greater sense of accountability in teams, with members able to both encourage and regulate each other. Innovation and creative thinking also happen more efficiently and abundantly in a team – the brainstorm or 'spit-balling' approach to problems or challenges in a team brings about numerous different approaches and angles, based on the teams varied life and work experiences.
